These table leg blanks were cut from green logs at 3" X 3" and will have shrunk somewhat in both dimensions as much as 1/4". They are rough sawn and will require surfacing for square legs or can of course be turned, but don't plan on more than a 2-1/2" finished size. First quality walnut and cherry will contain little to no sapwood. Other species will likely be a mix of sap and heartwood. Firsts will be relatively free of any defects, knots, etc. All attempts were made for straight-grained pieces, but this is not guaranteed. Grain can run anywhere from totally parallel to the face to completely diagonal.
Seconds will contain any or all of the following defects:
• Small tight knots
• Sapwood on cherry and walnut
• Minor insect damage, pinholes, etc.
• Small amount of bark on an edge or corner
• Minor surface checking
• Twisted or diagonal grain
• Mineral staining or discoloration
• Small amounts of crotch or other character graining

Fear not, the really bad material ends up in my woodstove. Most of the feedback I get is that the customer doesn't see why they were classed as seconds.
